Halfway between fetishism and accumulation, book collecting is, like any other collecting, a personal and subjective practice. Each book in a collection tells the story of why it is there, while speaking to us about the person who decided to make it so. With the intention of aesthetically and conceptually exploring his collection, but also of constructing a blurred self-portrait through his interests, the publisher and bookseller Luis Cerveró shares in a public presentation some of the publications in his library. For the occasion, the founder of the publishing house Terranova invites the musician and visual artist Arnau Sala to accompany him, generating live improvised music in dialogue with the books, replacing words and concrete explanations with a more abstract and evocative language that captures the mystery implicit in every collecting gesture.

What matters is how it ends

Saturday 11.05, 16:00h

PARTICIPANTS:

Gerardo van Waalwijk van Doorn, Beatriz Olabarrieta (whose exhibition opens the same day), Violeta Mayoral and Jorge Bravo.

SUBJECT:

ethall and Beatriz Olabarrieta invite Gerardo Van Waalwijk van Doorn and Violeta Mayoral to hold a confrontation on the triangulation between the figure of the collector, the gallerist and the artist, based on the dissection of the recently opened exhibition and other works contributed by the guests themselves.

CAREO (CONFRONTATION):

Etymologically, «careo» (Spanish) derives from the Latin «cara». It consists of bringing face to face those who have had divergent statements in order to ascertain the truth of sayings or facts.

ACARAMENT EN DRET:

Diligence that is carried out in the investigation or as evidence in the act of the oral trial, of an extraordinary nature, to confront the testimonies or statements made in the process by the witnesses or the accused, when there have been divergences or contradictions between their manifestations, in order to clarify the truth of the facts.

Suggested poems

Thursday 9.05, 19:30h

Market and art are occasionally antagonistic concepts, but always interdependent. In galleries we have collectors, who are 'sensitive buyers'. What in other contexts is an oxymoron, in the context of art is a pleonasm.

There are pragmatic buyers who think about investing money or the colour palette of the room, and there are others who go much further, the ones we are interested in.

Marcel Pérez Iserte will be led by the suggestions of the artist Alina Zaikina, who by surprise and live will propose the reading of poems selected by her that conceptually contain references to the diversity of pieces that make up Iserte's collection, which also includes works by Zaikina.

Those of us who will witness this exchange anticipate coming into direct contact with the intangibles of the art market.

Marc Giró coments Ocaña

Friday 10.05, 19:00h

'Ocaña didn't like to be called gay; he always preferred proof, sissy or pansy, depending on the occasion. And he didn't call his acts or performances happenings. Close to the anarchists as he was, he did not accept to be called anything else than "libertarian", a word that he coined in his own jargon'. (Pedro G. Romero)

What is it that links us to a work of art and to those who create it?

Exhibition opening hours:
Thursday 9 and Friday 10.05, 10-20h
Saturday 11.05, 10-14h i 16-20h

Thursday 9.05, 18:30h

Meeting with the artist Julio Vaquero and the collectors Ramón Córdoba and Ignacio Martínez.

There is no single model or guide to collecting, it is something that takes shape with practice, but we are fascinated to hear the details and motives behind each collection. The fact of confronting different types and visions that have developed within the same city can bring us closer to the inner content of this activity and give us keys to understand it in an enriching way.

A tour through Mela Dávila Freire's library

With publications by Helena Almeida, Adam Broomberg and Oliver Chanarin, R. Buckminster Fuller, Lourdes Castro, Mirtha Dermisache, Roberto Equisoain, Ryan Gander, Joe Goode, Pati Hill, Nancy Holt, Dominique Hurth, Marcel Marceau, Roberto Massó, Annette Messenger, Michalis Pichler, Gretta Sarfaty, Barbara Schmidt-Heins, Gabriele Schmidt-Heins, Michael Snow, Annie Sprinkle, Eric Tabuchi, Athena Tacha, Marianne Wex and Joyce Wieland.

The Klingon frowns and replies with excelsis,
"Sorry I don't understand you".
Ryan Gander, 2008

A library is more than a collection of books: it is a carefully selected and organised collection, with subtle connections between its elements. Although it may initially appear to be a chaotic accumulation, each book is linked to others by mysterious affinities, forming a network of meaning. 'Free Association' presents the possible interrelationships that, like invisible threads charged with meaning, link some of the titles that are part of a personal library, in which artist's publications occupy an important space but coexist with printed materials that, a priori, do not seem to share the same rank. These connections, sometimes evident and sometimes barely perceptible, reveal the essence of the library as a unique collection.

Exhibition opening hours:

Rhizomatic collecting. Manuel Expósito in dialogue with Antoni Miralda and Gastón Lisak

A dialogue between the collector Manuel Expósito and two artists whose practices integrate the act of collecting objects and archiving them in cabinets of contemporary wonders: Antoni Miralda's Archivo de Food Cultura and Gastón Lisak's Arqueología Mundana project. The project takes a look at the practice of collecting as a living tool for building virtuous affective relationships, both with objects and living beings.

Expósito will present a series of works by Gastón Lisak from his private collection, in dialogue with pieces that he himself will select from Miralda's archive. Curated by Mariella Franzoni.

Exhibition opening hours:
Friday 10.05, 11:00 - 20:00h
Saturday 11.05, 11-14:30 & 15:30-20h

Friday 10.05, 18:00h

Presentation with the collector Manuel Expósito.

Filippo Tattoni-Marcozzi collection in Barry Salzman's exhibition

Exhibition opening hours:
Thursday 9 and Friday 10.05, 10:00 - 17:30h
Saturday 11.05, 11:00 - 14:00h

Saturday 11.05, 12:00h

Stefano Pisci moderates a conversation between the artist Barry Salzman and the collector Filippo Tattoni-Marcozzi.

The meeting will feature works from his collection in the artist's exhibition at the gallery, 'How We See The World', which highlights places marked by human conflict and suffering, showing how landscape can be a powerful medium for evoking memory and reconnecting audiences with issues they thought they knew deeply.
